Academic Staff

WELCOME

to IPU New Zealand

In our rapidly changing world of the 21st century, the citizens, the professionals, the leaders of tomorrow will increasingly require international understanding, perspectives and abilities that transcend international boundaries.

Many tertiary or higher education institutions have international students and international programmes but these students are often in the minority. IPU New Zealand is a genuinely international educational institution where international education means multinational and multicultural staff and students where the programmes involve international issues where 2nd language learning is the norm where students study in small classes alongside people from many other countries where people are encouraged to think globally beyond national boundaries and to see themselves as citizens of the world. This is very different to going somewhere to be educated as a visitor with local people in their institution. Our students come from more than twenty countries!

Being an international student is a challenge: to study away from home in another country that is very different to your own part of the world with new cultural experiences, often in another language and with different weather, foods and so on. Our students have been succeeding in living and studying in Palmerston North, New Zealand, for more than quarter of a century. Their IPU New Zealand qualifications and experiences give them skills, knowledge, values and memories that equip them well. They learn how to think independently, to make decisions, to be self-reliant and to function in a changing world.

IPU New Zealand graduates do many, many things: they can be found in many fields of employment: government organisations, NGOs, diplomacy, international business, sport, tourism, hospitality, the environment – to name just a few areas - and some in further study. Their IPU New Zealand qualifications are preparation for successful, enjoyable and rewarding life and work.

New Zealand is far away from many parts of the world but ours is a vibrant society that is regarded as safe and modern with high quality education, a multicultural population and many opportunities for new experiences and activities for international students. This booklet will also tell you about the attractions of our city of Palmerston North that is often called “student city.”

IPU New Zealand has a strong family feeling, classes are small, friendships are strong and our staff members are committed to supporting our students throughout their studies and life in our part of the world. IPU New Zealand will challenge and guide you towards success and towards your goal of playing a part in the world of tomorrow.

IPU New Zealand awaits you!

The Recreation Centre, used by student clubs and for various events, also has an adjoining gym. For special events and guests, we have the on campus 'Swan House', and the Kan Performing Arts Centre was recently developed for dance and music clubs to use.

The Library is a study space where students can work on research and assignments, whilst enjoying the panoramic view. The Library also has two tutorial rooms, used for teaching purposes, and for student club meetings.

ADMINISTRATION CENTRE

Students can visit the Administration Centre, where Student Support staff and senior faculty members work, to register for classes, collect packages, receive and fill out documents, ask for advice on personal matters, and much more.

SWAN HOUSE

Swan House is mainly used to host ambassadors and guests from affiliated schools. Dinners for parents attending our commencement and graduation ceremonies are also held here.

Many people participate at the city's diverse cultural events, take part in social and community activities, join local sporting clubs, and enjoy shows, numerous walking and bicycle tracks and exhibitions. Frequent buses, the local airport, and Palmerston North's central location make it easy to get around and see the rest of the country.

WELCOME

FROM THE MAYOR OF

PALMERSTON NORTH

Welcome to Palmerston North, the city of students. It is my privilege to welcome you here on behalf of the city.

Palmerston North is home to people from more than 100 different countries. IPU New Zealand is one of the key reasons why our city is becoming more multicultural. It is very fortunate for IPU New Zealand students that IPU New Zealand has received international recognition for its contribution to international education, and that the IPU New Zealand staff are held in high esteem in the educational sector. Our city values multiculturalism. Participation is the key to enjoyment and acceptance. Offering your hand to others; asking if you can join a sport or a club; turning up to support friends; these are key to understanding each other and key to creating a better city.

Grant Smith

The Mayor of Palmerston North

The history of IPU New Zealand

Our tertiary institute was conceptualised in 1987, when Hiroshi Ohashi, the Chairman of the Board of Trustees and other experts in the educational field across the Pacific-Rim nations assembled and discussed 'an ideal model for an innovative approach to tertiary education in the 21st century'.

Dr Kay Andersen, former Executive Director of WASC (Western Association of Schools and Colleges, USA) [1] was appointed as Director and supported Chairman Ohashi to lead the discussion. Dr Anderson's expertise in tertiary education and governmental approval procedures made a significant contribution to the project.

Professor Emeritus Herbert Passin, from Columbia University, also joined the project. His inexhaustible knowledge of tertiary education and the societies of the USA and Japan propelled the project forward. The discussion continued over a year and a half, delivering a new plan for establishing a tertiary educational system with a consortium of campuses in Pacific-Rim nations, where credits would be transferable and students could obtain a degree at any campus when all credits required for graduation were complete.

Our tertiary institute - known for 25 years until 2015 as International Pacific College (IPC Tertiary Institute) - was established as the first campus in 1990, the year of the 150th anniversary of New Zealand. Criteria for this establishment as envisaged by Chairman Ohashi included:

1. The campus must be developed in an environment where students' lives, assets and safety would be guaranteed.
2. The host country of the campus must offer globally competitive tertiary education.
3. An ideal, clean natural environment should be readily available around the campus for students to enjoy their collegiate life.

Our institute has successfully supported New Zealand students as well as international students living in New Zealand and away from their home countries, as well as domestic students for 25 years. Today, students from some two dozen countries live and study on our campus in Palmerston North while we have cooperative links with many tertiary institutions and secondary schools throughout Asia.

A second campus opened in 2007 in Okayama Prefecture, Japan. The International Pacific University, whose philosophy is to combine pedagogy, teacher education and physical education, has become a leading university in Chugoku region in Japan in the few years since its establishment.

The Japanese government recently approved IPU Japan to launch its new Bachelor of Contemporary Business Management in April 2016. These developments will enable exchange of students and faculty between the two campuses, which was the vision stated at the outset.

In September 2015 we became known as the Institute of the Pacific United New Zealand (IPU New Zealand). This name is more clearly indicative of the extent of our reach and linkages from New Zealand across the Pacific and into Asia.

Preparations are under way for establishing a third international campus. As the first campus and the central hub of the strategic plan, IPU New Zealand will continue developing itself as a unique tertiary institute in the Pacific-Rim nations, with its strong focus on Asia.

[1] WASC is one of the official academic bodies in the USA responsible for the accreditation of public and private universities, colleges, secondary and elementary schools.
